9	CASE BASED QUESTION	Case Based Question 1. Read the source given below and answer the questions that follow: In the early 19th century, the colonial state thought that forests were unproductive. They were considered to be wilderness that had to be brought under cultivation so that the land could yield agricultural products and revenue, and enhance the income of state. So between 1880 and 1920, cultivated area rose by 6.7 million hectares. We always see the expansion of agriculture as a sign of progress. But we should not forget that for land to be brought under the plough; forests have to be cleared. By the early 19th century, oak forests in England were disappearing. This created a problem of timber supply for the Royal Navy. QUESTION: The main reason that the colonial state considered forests unproductive was
10	ASSERTION AND REASON	Assertion (A): The country is divided into different areas for election purpose. Reason (R) : These areas are called electoral constituencies.
